Theme of the Seminar:
Women constitute half of the population. Women are deprived and are subjected to discrimination in every aspect. Nowadays, women are engaged in different and self-help activities in different areas. A large number of women are involved in agricultural activities and they are self-organized and self-confident. In general, women are the backbone of the rural economy and they contribute a large part of the total gross domestic product. Women are also involved in various government schemes and projects, which are beneficial for their social and economic development. Through various schemes, women are empowered and their status is improved.
