International Conference on "Photonics, VLSI and Signal Processing"

Prof. Latha Nataraj, USA

A two day International Conference on "Photonics, VLSI and Signal Processing" was organized by the KU College of Engineering & Technology on March 28-29, 2014. University Vice-Chancellor Prof. B. Venkat Rathnam inaugurated the conference as Chief Guest and felt that the benefits of research should reach the common people at large. All the facilities of modern life are the result of technological developments, he asserted. The KU Engineering College which is only five years old organizing an international conference is a matter of pride, he noted. Delivering the key note address, US Army Research Centre Prof. Latha Nataraj said that Photonics has wider applications in modern society and it has the efficiency to increase speed enormously. Prof. Gurusurthy of Malaysia University said that with advancements in VLSI, a number of applications are packed into a small chip facilitating reduction in size to a large extent. Prof. Vamshi Chodavarapu of McGill University of Canada said that research becomes fruitful when the ideas are converted into products. S.P. Dash, Director of Defence Electronics Research Laboratory of Hyderabad exhorted the researchers to stick to their basics and possess all the related concepts to be a good designer in the field of electronics. Registrar Prof. K. Sayulu, Conference Director and College Principal Prof. T. Srinivasulu, Convener V. Mahender and others were present. About 170 research papers were presented in 17 parallel technical sessions conducted at three venues during the two days.

National Seminar on "Stress and Well-Being"

The School of Distance Learning and Continuing Education (SDLCE) and the Department of Psychology of the University organized a two day national seminar on "Stress and Well-being" on March 24-25, 2014. Inaugurating the Seminar, the University Vice-Chancellor Prof. B. Venkat Rathnam said stress is universal and unavoidable accompaniment of modern life. We should love to live every moment of life without much expectations to avoid disappointment causing stress. Delivering Keynote Address, S.V. University retired professor M. Basavanna said that we feel stress when we face certain demands which we cannot manage. It is not the stress that kills us but it is our reaction to it, he explained. One should adopt right attitude to convert negative stress to positive one, reduce daily hassles, know one's limits, follow reasonable schedule, learn to say 'no' when people make excessive demands. Stress may cause psychological problems like depression, anger, anxiety, restlessness, alcohol and drug abuse besides biological problems like migraine headache, allergic reactions, high blood pressure, ulcers, sleep problems etc. Regular physical exercise, meditation, silence, building intimate and strong relationships, taking breaks from routines, positive thinking are some of the practical tips to eliminate stress. Seminar Director Prof. D. Rajendra Prasad, Convener Dr. V. Ramachnadram, Prof. K. Seetharama Rao, Prof. N. Rama Swamy, Dr. K. Niranjan Reddy, Dr. S. Bhaskakar Naidu also spoke. The seminar was conducted in ten parallel sessions in which 160 papers were presented.
