Vol. 10 Issue 2 July, 2015

Vice-Chancellor Speaks....

Greetings on the eve of Independence Day and University Formation Day

Education is the process of facilitating learning, knowledge, skills, values and beliefs empowering people. It is a great leveller too. Universities are centres of excellence in teaching, research and innovation. It is an intellectual, broad-based organisation, hence the ideals associated with it need to be original and inspirational. In our country we now have 722 universities as against the National Knowledge commission recommendation of 1500.

The increasing number of private, deemed universities with their commercial intent poses a new challenge in the form of creating disparities and inequalities much against our goals of equity and participation. This challenge can be countered by establishing more centre and state public universities and increasing the rate of enrolment. Besides, quality in teaching and research in universities needs to be strengthened in order to promote quality education. Skill development needs to be given preference for better employability; and soft skills need to be imparted to the students so as to make them fully equipped to be able to meet up to the challenges in society. Similarly, collaboration with industry, MNCs and foreign universities needs to be encouraged on a huge scale. The joint efforts of centre and states will go a long way in realizing the goals during the 12th Plan. It is the commitment and realization of their huge responsibility by the teaching Faculty that will effectively thwart the above challenges and promote quality education in our universities. I hope the 39 year old Kakatiya University that had been at the originating point of many landmark events in Telangana history will take up the new challenges in earnest.
