

Master of Philosophy

Master of Philosophy course is introduced in the Department during the academic year 1988 with an intake of 12 students. As broad areas of research studies under this programme, regional studies of Ancient, Medieval and Modern Periods are chosen. A regular teaching programme is undertaken for 12 months and candidates have to work for their dissertation on the Research topic assigned to them for remaining 6 months under the guidance of staff members duly recognized as research supervisors.

Paper –I:            Historiography & Methodology

Paper – II:        Broad areas of Specialization

- a) Ancient Indian History
- b) Medieval Indian History
- c) Modern Indian History