About the Seminar

The importance of family structure and its system in India had been recognized ever since Vedic ages. The concept of Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam (The earth is one family) was given to the world by India. Indian people learnt the essential themes of cultural life within the bosom of a family system. However, the last century witnessed the considerably changes in Indian social scenario. A sudden shift from joint to nuclear to single parent or childless families is obvious. In such a situation the family dealing with financial, social and moral obligation is becoming more and harder for the earning member of family.

The family as a social institution has been undergoing change. Both in its structure and functional changes have taken place. The family structure is conceptualized as the configuration of role, power, status and relationships in the family which depends upon the family's socio-economic background, family pattern and extent of urbanization. In spite of urbanization and industrialization in the contemporary Indian society, the family as an institution continues to play a vital role in the Society.

The transition of family system may not indulge the values of traditional style of joint family. It is merely changing the roots and undergo severe situations, role play, economy, relationship among members, unemployment, decision making, individualism, behavioral changes, attitudinal changes, personality problems, collectivism, corrosion of ethical, moral and cultural values, migration, child birth, CMR, MMR, Child rearing practices, sibling abuse, child abuse, trafficking (child and women), marital practices, marital problems, family violence, old age problems, etc. are prevailing in present familial system. Due to the incessant and emergent impact of urbanization and westernization, nuclear family has now become the characteristic feature of the Indian society. Another noticeable change in the Indian family system is dissolution of marriages and the number of divorce cases is slowly mounting day by day.

In briefly, these changes in the socio-economic-political-cultural milieu of our society had led to changes in the structures, functions, roles, relationships and values of the family. The society need immediate attention on all these foremost issues and challenges and reconciliation is required to maintain the predictable cordial and diplomatic atmosphere in the contemporary familial system.

In this connection, the Department of Sociology & Social Work, University Arts and Science College is planning to organize a Two-day National Seminar on "Changing Trends of Family System in India: Major Issues and Challenges".
