ABOUT THE SEMINAR

With businesses focusing on generating profits, sustainability was not a popular concern among companies until recently. Now, in the era of globalization, multinational corporations and local businesses are adopting a new consciousness known as Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR). Companies are now expected to perform well even in non-financial areas such as human rights, business ethics, environmental policies, corporate contributions, community development, corporate governance, and workplace issues. Ensuring social responsibility of businesses has always been a major concern for both policy makers and decision makers. It has also attracted a lot of discussion in recent years among researchers and professionals in management due to emerging concerns of societal issues. There is a growing consensus that business is part of and subservient to the greater cause of the society. The introduction of Companies Act 2013 mandates spending on Corporate Social Responsibility activities through statutory provision, further strengthens the Indian tradition of socially responsible businesses. In addition, there is a need for active discussions on the various issues and challenges to be adopted by organisations for blending business with social responsibility with experiences gained in implementation after the introduction of the Act. In the above backdrop, there is a need for redefining the concept of CSR in industry's approach for better execution of CSR in India. This seminar provides a platform for practitioners, academicians and researchers to reflect and deliberate on issues and challenges to share their experiences on socially responsible businesses and CSR activities.
